Returning to Maine, he went to Upton about 47 years ago and engaged in farming. He married Miss Bertha Moss of that town. He had been prominent in town offices; was a member of the Grange and a staunch supporter of the church at Upton.

COMPOSING IS HOBBY OF BANDMASTER

Story of Anton Eugene Mainente of Gould Academy Faculty

(By Emmie B. Whitney in the Lewiston Journal Magazine Section March 9, 1935)

A short time ago Anton Eugene Mainente, 151 Wood street, Lewiston, received a letter from Thomas F. Darcy, Jr., Washington, D. C., associate leader of the United States Army band, asking him for "a copy of your beautiful composition, 'Mes Souvenirs de France' " to broadcast in the band programs over both major chains. Mr. Mainente also was asked to send his tone poem, "Impressions of an Afternoon" and the March, "Colonel Bigelow," written in 1921 and dedicated by Mr. Mainente to former Col. Harry M. Bigelow of the 103rd Infantry Maine National Guard. The compositions were forwarded by Mr. Mainente after making some minor changes in them, and the "Impressions" were heard over a National network last week. The composition was dedicated to Associate Leader Darcy and members of U. S. Army Band.

Played by Army and Navy Bands

This will be by no means the first time Mr. Mainente's compositions have been played by the Government military bands. He was invited to come to Washington to conduct the United States Navy band in his own compositions in broadcasts from that city, and did so in 1930. The compositions were "America 1917," and "My Souvenirs of France."

Capt. William J. Stannard, leader of the U. S. Army Band, has played some of Mr. Mainente's compositions on his programs and when the band toured Maine Mr. Mainente was asked to conduct his tone poem in cities where they played. Conductor Stannard, who is known the country over as a musical authority, rates Mr. Mainente as a composer with a gift of melody and fine understanding of harmony, instrumentation and phrasing. He also was impressed with Mr. Mainente's ability as a director.

His Long List of Compositions

Mr. Mainente has a long list of compositions to his credit. They include a romance for symphony orchestra, "Romanza Recordanza"; a melody, "Antica Melodia," also for symphony orchestra; march, "Colonel Bigelow"; two tone poems for band, "The Afternoon," "Souvenirs de France"; tone poem, "Souvenirs," for orchestra, dedicated to Ralph L. Flanders, manager of the New England Conservatory of Music; a symphony, "Symphonie Triomphale," for symphony orchestra and "Dedication March," composed for the dedication exercises of Gould Academy, Bethel, besides many smaller works for solo instruments with piano accompaniment, ensemble combinations and songs. "The Afternoon" was composed in Boston in 1914, the "Souvenirs" were sketched in France while the "Dedication" march was written last summer.

Mr. Mainente's composing, however, is rather a hobby with him than a profession. "I like to compose for my own gratification," he told the Lewiston Journal representative, "but I enjoy teaching best for the reason that good music thrills and gives me unbounded enjoyment and I hope that through my teaching I may influence or inspire many to continue its study long enough to enable them to receive those heavenly messages music brings to mankind."

Knowing this joy in service and his enthusiasm as a musical educator—Continued on Page Six—

MISS HERRICK'S ADDRESS INTERESTING, INSTRUCTIVE

About 50 people gathered in Garland Chapel last Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Congregational Ladies' Club, to hear a most interesting and instructive address by Miss Margaret Herrick on the work of the Department of Health of Maine. The speaker, who is Assistant to the Director in the Section of Communicable Diseases, first outlined the set-up of the whole Bureau of Health and described the functions of the various sections, such as Public Health Education, Sanitary Engineering, Vital Statistics, District Health Officers, Diagnostic Laboratory, Public Health Nursing, etc. With what seems to be a very small appropriation the Department is excellently administered and is doing an admirable piece of public service concerning which few of our citizens know very much.

Miss Herrick then passed to the work of her own section and in an interesting way told of the service of the Department in stamping out communicable diseases. Her enthusiasm for her work and quiet flashes of humor made her address enjoyable to all those present. The outbreak of rabies of a few years ago and the prompt action of the Department which doubtless prevented a bad outbreak of typhoid in Augusta were used to illustrate the great importance of this work. After the address several questions were asked by members of the audience and answered by the speaker in such a way as to show how familiar she is with the work of her department.

Dr. Wallace in introducing Miss Herrick said that Bethel is proud to have one of her own citizens in so important and responsible a public position and expressed the hope that the Ladies' Club might sponsor similar evening meetings and invite Miss Herrick to speak again on other parts of her work.

MAINE DAY, AUG. 27, AT SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION

With headquarters in the House of Hospitality, Balboa Park, residents and former residents of Maine are assured a most cordial welcome by the San Diego County State of Maine Society for the duration of the California Pacific International Exposition, dating from its opening, May 29, and through all the following 165 golden days. The earnest wish of the San Diego Pine Tree Staters is for a grand round-up of Maine and former Maine people, wherever residing, on Maine Day, Tuesday, Aug. 27.

Happily the date selected for Maine Day at the Exposition is in honor of the 126th anniversary of the birth of one of Maine's greatest statesmen, Hannibal Hamlin, native of Paris, Oxford County. Hamlin represented Maine with distinction in the state legislature and as governor, as well as in both houses of congress and as vice-president during Lincoln's first term as president.

Welcoming committees of the San Diego County State of Maine Society will be constantly on the job at Maine headquarters, anxious to render every service within their power. The officers are: President, Tabor G. Hersum, formerly of Belgrade; vice-president, Arthur E. Blodgett, Unity; secretary, Miss Marion B. Tebbets, Belgrade; treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Bryer, Boothbay; press representative, James H. Heath, whose last stand, 1886-1900, was in Auburn.

MEMORIAL DAY
T. C. Harbaugh

They march once more, but not as when They sought the battle fray, A thinning line of gallant men Whose thoughts are far away;
Their white locks float upon the breeze,
Their step is short and slow,
But in their eyes the watcher sees
The fire of long ago.

Under the standard, bullet-torn,
Behind the muffled drum,
In uniforms in battle worn, Adown the street they come;
Hats off! Ere long 'twill be too late To honor thus the Blue.
These are the men who grimly wait To hear the last tattoo.

Bring chaplets for the men who sleep Beneath the amber pines—
The brave who in the forest deep Formed once the battle lines;
No clarion notes arouse them now,
No foes around them lie,
The grass is waving o'er each brow Beneath the Union's sky.

For them no drums of battle beat Advance or overthrow,
For them no bugles sound retreat
No dreams of midnight foe;
Among the cedars and the pines, Beside the river's flow,
They gently camp in sacred lines Who battled long ago.

Columbia weaves a wreath of fame,
Her hands the blossoms spread,
She knows her sons, she calls by name
Her living and her dead;
Beneath the banner of the stars,
In Solitude's array,
She crowns her heroes of the wars On loved Memorial Day.

THE LAND THAT USED TO BE

Whenever the world goes wrong,
Dear,
And no joy in the day you see,
Just steal away from the Land of Now To the Land That Used To Be;
And always and ever you'll find it there However the rest of the world doth fare.
Then shut your eyes and hark to the days When somebody loved you and somebody praised, Because you did something no other could do In the very same way, for you made it you.

(Special to the Citizen) Friends, this is only a three-minute talk, and we are not going to weary you. I feel assured that there are "listeners in" on these weekly broadcasts; and I want to thank all who do so. We cannot make very extensive remarks from this station, but I feel thankful that we are privileged to point out the Word of God to interested persons.

What a wonderful character was that man Stephen! (Acts 7:55-60). He was the first Christian martyr; and there has been a long line of such noble souls since who have given their lives for the Truth, that makes us free in God.

What would you give, dear friend, out there on "the air" to have such an intimacy of soul with Christ (such a real Christian experience) that you would sooner lay down your life than to deny His wonderful Saviour? If there were more people like that, the world would soon be converted. History records the fact that whenever men and women have been persecuted to "the death" for their religious principles that Christianity has taken deeper root and has spread faster and faster. Real, stalwart, Christian souls do not fear death!

What is so sadly lacking in this age—is genuine Christian living! Those who only have the "form" of godliness will not stand the "testings" when they come. Let us, personally, answer this question in our hearts:—what sacrifices have we really made for Christ? or, what persecutions (for His sake) have we suffered? If we cannot find any of these credits in our record, we are not worthy to bear the name of Christian.

I would make two classifications of martyrs: there are those who have met a speedy death as witnesses for Jesus; courageously facing the "sword," the "axe," the "torch," the "cross," "hurling rocks," "furious beasts," and many other forms of torture. Then, there are others, who uncomplainingly suffer persecutions all through their lives, without "striking back" at their tormentors.

I am going to make the statement right here, this morning, that nothing is short of the "martyr" spirit will ever win this old sinful world to Jesus Christ. Unbelievers must be shown that we are sincere and really enjoy what we profess, before they will ever be attracted to us. If we say we belong to Christ and still pursue the "old paths of sin," we deceive ourselves; and the world draws back and says, "We do not want religion, if it is like that." When I am through with these humble remarks, I earnestly request you to "write down" the things you have given up (cheerfully) for Christ. My friend, after a self-examination, do you think that there is much difference between your life and your unprofessional neighbor's?

When you have to face a situation that is difficult—conduct yourself as you believe Jesus would. He confronted by it. St. Stephen's joy was triumphant; and it weighed his physical suffering that he exclaimed, "Behold, I see the heavens opened." Inexpressible will be ours when we lay down our lives, if we wholly belong to Christ. I want to see Jesus; and am asking for my "release" to come on. (Let us bow our heads:) Now, may the grace of our Lord Saviour, Jesus Christ; the love of God—the Father; and the blessing and fellowship of the Holy Spirit abide with (each of) you now and evermore! Amen.

The Commencement issue of the Academy Herald came off the press last Friday and the sales reported for the past week would indicate that this edition is meeting with decided success. INGERSOLL'S TRIBUTE TO THOSE WHO DIED FOR THEIR COUNTRY

We cover the graves of the heroic dead with flowers. The past rises before me, as it were, like a dream.
Again we are in the great struggle for national life. We hear the sounds of preparation—the music of the holier drums, the silver voices of heroic bugles. We see the pale cheeks of women and the flushed faces of men, and in those assemblages we see all the dead whose dust we have covered with flowers. We lose sight of them no more. We are with them when they enlist in the great army of freedom.
We see them part with those they love. Some are walking for the last time in quiet woody places with the maldens they adore. Others are bending over cradles kissing babes that are asleep.

We see them all as they march proudly away, under the flaunting flag, keeping time to the grand, wild music of war—marching down the streets of the great cities, through the towns and across the prairies, down to the fields of glory, to do and die for the eternal right. We go with them, one and all. We stand guard with them in the wild storm and under the quiet stars. We are with them in ravines running with blood in the furrows of old fields. We are with them between contending hosts, unable to move, wild with thirst, the life ebbing slowly among the withered leaves. We see them pierced by balls and torn with shells in the trenches, by forts and in the whirlwind of the charge, where men become iron with nerves of steel. We are at home when the news comes that they are dead. We see the madden in the shadow of her first sorrow. We see the silvered head of the old man bowed with the last grief.

These heroes are dead. They sleep under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the mournful willows and the embracing vines. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battle, in the roar of the conflict, they found the serenity of death. I have one sentiment for the soldier living and dead—cheers for the living tears for the dead.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems, Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Every Supreme Court makes history. The existing Court has a chance offered to few of its predecessors to add important pages to that unwritten, unimishable volume which might be titled "The United States Government."

Most dramatic recent Court decision was that of the gold cases, in which the Administration's unprecedented action of seizing all the country's gold was held to be compatible with the basic law of the land—the much talked about, little understood Constitution. A few weeks ago the Court passed on another case which received fewer headlines, was less dramatic, but which may prove to be of even greater importance than the gold imbroglio—the Railroad Pension Act.

This Act was passed by the last session of Congress. Under it, by governmental fiat, the railroads of the country were forced to make provision for pensioning their old employees, whether they wanted to or not, and whether or not they had the money. The bill provided that the railroads' payments be pooled, so that the stronger lines would help to provide for the employees of lines which were financially weak.

The case went immediately to Court, dragged through a series of lower tribunals, arrived at last at the Court of Last Resort where nine wise old men listened to long arguments by able counsel for both sides. Result: The Supreme Court declared that the Act was beyond the powers granted to Congress by the Constitution, was thus null and void.

The decision was immensely important in that it establishes a precedent which, in the opinion of most commentators learned in the intricacies of Constitutional law, makes it almost inevitable that the Court will likewise throw out any social security legislation that Congress may pass.

In the words of "Business Week," the majority of the Court "flatly declined that Congress can use its constitutional authority over interstate commerce for merely social and humanitarian ends, as contrasted with the protection of legal rights." That is a blow to the whole underlying philosophy of the New Deal.

Directly following the decision, New Dealers said that they would redraw the act, and base it, not on Congress' interstate commerce power, but on its power to tax. Here again the Court seems to stand in the way. It has insisted that a taxing act must be a genuine attempt to raise federal revenue—that it cannot be camouflaged so as to use it to promote a purely social end.

Even so, New Dealers and others who favor social legislation, have one chance to emerge victorious.
That chance lies in the fact that the decision—like so many major Supreme Court decisions—was 5 to 4. A number of the Justices are past the usual retirement age, and what Justice Hughes called "the attrition of years" may force one or more of them to step down before long. In that case, the President could place a new Justice on the bench, whose viewpoint toward the Constitution is liberal—and the balance of power would swing back to the Hughes-Brandeis-Stone-Cardozo side. The line is very clearly drawn on the Court now, with those four justices supporting the broad view of the Constitution, and with Justices McReynolds, Vandeventer, Sutherland and Butler clinging to the belief that the document should not be "stretched" in any particular. The unknown quantity is Justice Roberts, who votes with one group one time, another the next.

It is also interesting that there appears to be more dissension within the Court than in the past, more bitterness in the decisions. Justice Hughes' minority decision in the Pension case, in which he held that the commerce clause gave Congress the necessary power to pass the act, amounted almost to a denunciation of the majority.

There the issue stands. If, when the social security laws and similar legislation come to the Court, its personnel is the same as at present, the chances are they will be thrown out. If the President has the opportunity to appoint a Justice to supplant one of the conservatives, the chances are they will be upheld. That is the trouble with a 5-to-4 split—it inevitably breeds uncertainty, in that it can be changed overnight.

How good is business. Outside of those industries which are again facing the threat or existence of strikes, it is doing well and, seasonal changes taken into account, is improving in various basic lines.
Steel production recently stood at 45 per cent of capacity, an encouraging level for this time of year. March sales of passenger cars were 98 per cent ahead of last year—show no sign of diminishing.
Chrysler's sales for the first quarter were the highest in its history.
Machine tool makers had the best April business in five years, and electrical goods manufacturers are reporting increased orders. Real-estate construction is exceptionally good, will probably improve with summer.

"I seem to have run out of gas," he said and muttered to himself, "Here's where I do some fast work."

The girl's face, small and white was turned up to his, her eyes glowing dizzily from beneath heavy lids.
Her red lips were parted and she sighed faintly.

He bent over her—

And then—

He yanked out a tooth.

He was her dentist.

STAGGERING BLOW TO NRA

Washington—In a day fraught with disaster to the "New Deal" Chief Justice Hughes read the unanimous opinion of the United States Supreme Court, to the effect that the National Industrial Recovery Act is unconstitutional, that it is an unlawful delegation of powers by Congress to the President and an invasion of the authority of the State. So sweeping is the decision that is considered doubtful by constitutional authorities in such form that it will survive the test of the highest court. To add further confusion to the Administration's program, the Court also ruled that the President had violated his constitutional powers in summarily discharging William E. Humphrey as Federal Trade Commissioner, and the Frazier-Lemke Farm Moratorium Act, which had the President's approval, is unconstitutional.

THE NORTHWEST KIDNAPING

Tacoma, Wash.—Faced with penalty of death if caught, kidnapers held 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, heir to the vast lumber fortune of the Northwest, for $200,000 ransom. While a hurriedly organized corps of Federal operatives kept their hands off until the distracted parents could make arrangements to pay the ransom, plans proceeded nevertheless to weave a net to bag the band who stole the lad almost from under the eyes of the Weyerhaeuser chauffeur as he waited for him to come from school.
Government "G" men, pointing to the Lindbergh case, declare the kidnapers will never escape, however long the chase may last.

COLONEL WILLIAMS COURT- MARTIALED

Washington—For the first time in ten years army generals faced the grim task of court-martialing a fellow officer of high rank. With the utmost secrecy surrounding the proceedings, Col. Alexander E.
Williams, West Point Spanish-American and World War veteran, stood accused of accepting a loan of $2,500 from a concern selling the Army supplies; also that he perjured himself in denying it when first questioned. After three days, ten brother officers found him gilty as charged, voted that he be dismissed from the service but urged clemency because of his long and faithful service. The President, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, has the final say as to punishment.

FATHER COUGHLIN PACKS THE GARDEN

New York—From the Shrine of the Little Flower in Detroit, Father Charles Edward Coughlin brought his message personally to New York. Packing the huge Madison Square Garden with 23-000 followers paying from 40 cents to two dollars a seat, he vigorously lambasted his pet foes, capitalism, bankers, and low wages. Spectators loudly booed reporters in the press benches when the red-faced priest called newspapers "tools of the bankers." When asked if he would pay his respects to Cardinal Hayes in whose archdiocese he was speaking without the Cardinal's permission, he replied, "I don't think the Cardinal would be bothered with me." Two prominent Catholics chose this occasion to speak out.
The Rev. Father Wilfrid Parsons, powerful leader of American Roman Catholics and editor of the Catholic weekly, "America," accused the radio priest of pushing "doubtful legislation" instead of trying to bring about a "change of mind and soul." In Boston, William Cardinal O'Connell mentioned no names but expressed scorn for those who "stir up risings and create discontent in the hearts of the poor."

WORLD'S BIGGEST LINER ON ITS WAY

Havre, France—France's famed national pride attained new impetus last week. Amid screeching whistles, booming cannon, roaring crowds, the new French super-liner Normandie received its official blessing. President Lohren of France spent a busy day of inspection, voiced general enthusiasm a toast: "To the largest and tters, and bring spirits and hearts they have successfully overshadowed the Normandies' only compo-rival, Britain's Queen Mary. Tho rival, the Normandie is heavier 6000 tons. And the Queen Ma-

The score was 4 to 4 at the end of the fifth inning but the sixth spelled defeat for the Gould nine when Norway crossed the plate seven times.

PROTECT YOUR LIFE AND THE LIVES OF OTHERS!

THERE are three questions you should ask yourself about the tires you buy:

- 1—"Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"
- 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"
- 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Answer No. 1—Harvey S. Firestone early realized the value of tire traction and safety and was the first to design an All Rubber Non-Skid Tire. Through the years Firestone has led the way in the design and development of tires with most effective non-skid treads.

Firestone does not depend solely on traction and non-skid tests made by its own engineers—it employs a leading University to make impartial tests for non-skid efficiency of its tires, and their most recent report shows that Firestone High Speed Tires stop the car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

Answer No. 2—Blowout protection must be built into a tire. Friction and heat within the tire is the greatest cause of blowouts. Firestone protects its tires from friction and heat by a patented process which soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. This is an additional process known as Gum-Dipping, by which every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight pounds of rubber. This extra process costs more and is not used in any other make of tire.

Leading race drivers investigate the inbuilt qualities of the tires they use, because their very lives depend upon their tires, and they always select Firestone Tires for their daring speed runs. In fact, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling Indianapolis 500-mile race for fifteen consecutive years, and they were on the 5,000-pound car that Ab Jenkins drove 3,000 miles in 23½ hours on the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, without tire trouble of any kind. These amazing performance records are proof of the greatest blowout protection ever known.

Answer No. 3—Thousands of car owners reporting mileage records of 40,000 to 75,000 miles, is proof of the long mileage and greater economy by equipping with Firestone High Speed Tires. Let these unequalled performance records be your buying guide.

Go to the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer and let him equip your car with Firestone Tires, the safest and most economical tires built.

Only American on School Staff
Dr. Damrosch chose his staff of professors from among eminent French musicians. Mr. Mainente was the only American appointed by Dr. Damrosch who made him leader of the school band. Mr. Mainente also arranged much of the music and taught harmony. There were 14 teachers in the school. Mr. Mainente's band consisted of about 80 men, most of them under 30 years of age. To begin with, there were no French horns in the band, no oboes and no bassoon and musicians had to be

While studying in France Mr. Malinowski paid his way by playing in theatre orchestras. He married the young woman whom he had met at Beaune and their little daughter, now 13 years old, was born before they left France.

Illness compelled him to give up his studies and his theatre work and go to the home of his wife's parents in the country. When he had recovered sufficiently he returned to Boston with his wife and

Caruso Always Gay
 "Caruso was always in high spirits, as I remember him. Always singing little snatches of song off-stage. Always ready with his little jests and doing the unexpected thing. In his merriest moods he would seize one of the little ballet-dancers if he chanced to come upon her back stage and sling her up over his shoulder."

He was later to be the conductor of an opera company himself, touring the country with the Dorée company from New York. He regards the months with them among his most interesting and valuable experiences. He had to be prepared

Mr. Malnente has been authorized by the New England Conservatory of Music to prepare pupils to enter the institution. He values highly a collection of letters speaking in high praise of his work from Dr. Walter Damrosch, Dr. William R. Chapin; Gustave Tinelot, head of the Violin Dept. of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester; Mrs. Cecile Genhart, head of piano dept. at the Eastman School of Music; Capt. William J. Stannard, leader of U. S. Army Band; Lieut. Charles Bentner, leader of U. S. Navy Band; Col. Harry M. Bigelow, Portland; Louis Kloeppel, trumpeter of Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the teachers under whom he has studied. Thomas F. Darcy, Jr., associate director of the U. S. Army Band introduced Mr. Malnente in the recent broadcast of his work as "an eminent American conductor and composer."

"That was the subconscious re-

"Mrs. Merton has a strong religious mania. That girl's a mighty healthy specimen," he continued. "Everything about her seems to indicate sound ancestry, and I'm more than ever convinced that her mental disturbance is not organic. However, that's a lead we can run down after we've fixed her nose."

"We'll not fix it in this city, my boy," Thus McNamara.

"Why not?"
"Because when that girl is well she'll probably elect to live her life here, and I don't want a soul in this city, with the exception of ourselves, to know that once she had a saddle nose and a dual personality."

"We can trust the ethical integrity of the man I purpose—"
"I'll trust nobody but myself—and then not too much. Where is the best plastic surgeon in this country?"

"In New York city."
"Lanny, I'll ask the police commission for a sixty-day leave of absence. We'll be married at once and take this child to New York with us, put her in a hospital there and have the job done. While it's being done we'll have our honeymoon."

"Three is a crowd—on a honeymoon," Stephen warned.

"It's nothing of the sort," Lanny defended. "Stevie, you mind your own business. Dan and I know our way about."

"Indeed? Well, just because you're so contumacious, I'm going to tell you something. If I hadn't promoted this engagement, you and Dan would not now be engaged. Dan had you up on a pedestal—which is where you never belonged—and you're so naturally man-shy you never even learned the rudiments of the comon as practiced by the dullest, so I talked the matter up! I told Dan you were crazy about him and worked up his courage."

"You're a liar," McNamara said, feebly and without malice.

"Dan McNamara is one man who doesn't have to have help with his courage or thinking," Lanny declared proudly. "And you do, Stephen Burt. You're adept at lording it over your befuddled patients, but Rebecca P. Lanning is a horse of another color."

"I think I'll go home," Stephen retorted, and went.

He was back in the morning with the impedimenta of his profession.
Penelope greeted him gravely. "Good morning, Doctor Burt."

He started. The strident note of Nance Belden was gone from her voice. She spoke now in the low, level tone of the girl of breeding.
Then she sat down, and they conversed for half an hour on topics of general interest, but during that time she did not move once from her seat. Her vocabulary was free of underworld expressions, her diction perfect, her sentences grammatical.

"You have had a good night's rest, Miss Gatlin," he ventured.

She nodded, smiling a little. "I am not at all nervous this morning, Doctor Burt. When I am very tired, or excited about something, I am always horribly nervous."

"And you get dreadfully depressed, do you not?"

She nodded. "So depressed that
at times I want to die."

"Well, we might as well start your physical examination. I'm going to try to ascertain why you can't be cheerful always. There's a renson, of course, for your nervousness and depression, so I want to examine you very meticulously and see if your trouble can be charged
up to some physical condition. Let me feel your pulse."

It was eighty-three, full and strong.

Stephen's examination of the girl was as complete as modern medical science could make it, and when the last laboratory report came in three days later he called Lanny to discuss the girl.

"With the exception of a subnormal chest expansion, Lanny, that girl is without doubt the healthiest young woman I have ever examined.
Her sole physical defect is her nose.
But for that I think she'd be a husky little athlete right now. I'll write up my report on her and you can hand a copy of it to the man who is to do the operation. I've wired him that I was sending on a patient, and he has agreed to care for her. I see by the morning papers that Mac has been given a leave of absence."

Lanny nodded.

"When are you and Dan to be married?"

"Tomorrow." We're flying to Reno to avoid the three-day notice of intention to marry demanded by the California law."

"Penelope flying with you?"

"Naturally. She's my bridesmaid!"

"Who's going to give the bride away?"

"Nobody. Dan and I are too old to stand for a long-drawn-out marriage ceremony."

"Well, I suppose I'm stuck for a wedding present. How much money have I got in the bank?"

"Approximately twenty thousand.
I'm going to buy you some Argentine bonds today. There's no reason why those bonds shouldn't be selling at—"

"Lanny, you're mercenary. I don't care for a dissertation on bonds.
Draw yourself a check for ten thousand and spent it all in riotous living. Give old Dan a real blow out—"

"Stevie, you're mad!"

"Quiet, please. Love from the boss, Lanny, and no back talk from you. And for heaven's sake do get a half-way intelligent nurse to take your place while you're away."

"I've engaged Miss Ordway."

"Horrible. Her face would stop a parade. She's efficient, but terrible to look at."

The tears were welling in Lanny's eyes. "Oh, Stevie, I want you to be safe—while I'm away," she choked.

"No holy-toity—young thing—with her sweet smile—and winning ways
—and you such a softy—oh, Stevie, Stevie, I can't bear to leave you. If I do, something dreadful will happen to you." And Lanny laid her head on her desk and sobbed heartily.

However, Stephen knew what was good for Lanny. "You make me ill," he said coldly. "You carry on
like a girl of sixteen."

Instantly Lanny was furious.
"You don't appreciate me," she charged.

"Be still. Where's the check book? On an occasion such as the present I suppose I should sign the check myself."

"It wouldn't do any good if you did, darling. You've never registered your signature at your bank and you have no authority to sign checks on your own bank account. How funny!" and Lanny commenced to laugh. "How lucky I thought of that before leaving!"

Thereupon Stephen put both arms around her and kissed her three times and told her she was as the shadow of a rock in a weary land;
that she was very dear to him; that whatever she did was O. K. with him and he'd miss having his daily fight with her; and finally so softened her that she consented to let him fly to Reno and give the bride away. It developed that she had always wanted him to do this, but loathed putting him to so much trouble.

At the expiration of his leave Mc Namara returned to duty, but Lanny remained with Penelope in New York. Performed by a master, the operation had proved successful thus far. The actual work of the operation had been the least of it;
the subsequent care of the bone and
skin graft, and the surgeon's artistry in reshaping the nose were what required time and patience. Lanny reported that the patient would not be discharged for at least three months more.

"How did Penelope approach the operation?" Stephen queried of Mc Namara.

"Happily. Not a whit nervous.
Lanny had complete control over her." He grinned. "I passed as her Uncle Dan and the wife as Aunt Lanny. Lanny saw to it that the girl didn't do any talking while the doctor was present."

"You're a good fellow, Dan."

She nodded. "So depressed that
at times I want to die."

"Well, we might as well start

ing to try to ascertain why you can't

your place while you're away."

"I've engaged Miss Ordway."

a parade. She's efficient, but terrible
to look at."

The tears were welling in Lanny's
eyes. "Oh, Stevie, I want you to be
safe—while I'm away," she choked.

her sweet smile—and winning ways
—and you such a softy—oh, Stevie, Stevie, I can't bear to leave you. If I do, something dreadful will happen to you." And Lanny laid her
head on her desk and sobbed
heartily.

However, Stephen knew what
was good for Lanny. "You make me
ill," he said coldly. "You carry on
like a girl of sixteen."

Instantly Lanny was furious.
"You don't appreciate me," she
charged.

"Be still. Where's the check
book? On an occasion such as the
present I suppose I should sign the
check myself."

"It wouldn't do any good if you
on your own bank account. How
funny!" and Lanny commenced to
that before leaving!"

around her and kissed her three
times and told her she was as the
shadow of a rock in a weary land;
whatever she did was O. K. with
fight with her; and finally so soft-
ened her that she consented to let
always wanted him to do this, but
loathed putting him to so much trouble.

At the expiration of his leave Mc
Namara returned to duty, but Lanny
remained with Penelope in New York. Performed by a master, the
thus far. The actual work of the
operation had been the least of it;
try in reshaping the nose were what
required time and patience. Lanny
reported that the patient would not
be discharged for at least three months more.

operation?" Stephen queried of Mc Namara.

"Happily. Not a whit nervous.
Lanny had complete control over
her." He grinned. "I passed as her Uncle Dan and the wife as Aunt
girl didn't do any talking while the doctor was present."

She nodded. "So depressed that
at times I want to die."

"Well, we might as well start
your physical examination. I'm going to try to ascertain why you can't
be cheerful always. There's a ren-
son, of course, for your nervousness and depression, so I want to
examine you very meticulously and
me feel your pulse."

strong.

Stephen's examination of the girl
was as complete as modern medical

"Well," McNamara admitted humously. "It wasn't much of a honey-moon, I'll admit."

"Well, you have this consolation, my friend, your job is over, and mine will commence when Lanny returns with the girl."

"Dye think you can pull her through, lad?"

"I'm sure I can, Dan. A psychoneurosis generally is impossible to cure unless you know its causative factors and can remove them. If you can do that, it's all as simple as removing a wart. Dan, have you looked up the girl's ancestry?"

"I have not."

"Then do so immediately. We might run into a situation that will shed a bright effulgent beam of light on my job."

"The attorney that handled Gat-lin's affairs ought to be a good man to start with, Stephen. I'll motor to San Jose tomorrow and look him up. The bank will know who he is."

The bank president did know the name of the attorney, but added the disconcerting information that the man had been dead six years. Mc-Namara thereupon called the man's widow to ask if she still retained her late husband's files. He had a faint hope that if she would permit him to look into the Gatlin file he might find a clue. He was informed to his amazement, that about two years and a half before, Mrs. Merton had called upon her, asked for the file and had been given it.

To be continued next week.

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 2.

The Golden Text is: "When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed forever." (Psalms 92:7).

Among the citations from the Bible is the following: "Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God." (Ezek. 13:8).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "In no instance is the effect of animal magnetism, recently called hypnotism, other than the effect of illusion" (page 101).

Wednesday testimonial meeting at 7:30 p. m.

Animals have contributed to public health as practice subjects in surgery; as producers of serums, anti-tixons, and vaccines; and as experimental subjects in the study of diseases to which humans are also susceptible.

NEWS-WEEK

NEWS-WEEK is a weekly newspaper published in the form of a magazine; a news-magazine.

It operates like a great daily newspaper; it is served by more than five thousand correspondents in the strategic news-centers of the world; its teletypes are fed twenty-four hours a day by radio, by cable, by wire.

Yet it functions in a way difficult in the daily presentation of news; it incorporates in its treatment of events a background of fact possible only through remorseless research on innumerable fronts; the pictorial fact completes its presentation.

Daily newspapers keep news-readers abreast of the events of the moment; that is the peculiar duty of the newspaper.

Busy news readers read NEWS-WEEK to gain a brief, compact understanding of all the week's news they need to know.
